sixth sunday of easter (OF year C)
st joseph the workman (EF)

The development of Masses without music in the late Middle Ages meant that the Propers of the Mass, those antiphons appointed by the Church for the entrance, offertory and Communion at Mass, were often only recited in a soft voice by the priest at the Altar and rarely heard by the people. But those texts set the tone for a particular celebration of the Sacrifice of Redemption. Most of the Propers are taken directly from Scripture, but some are from ancient texts the Church composed specifically for the liturgy of the day. In some places, people began to sing hymns at the same time as the priest was reading the Propers from the Altar. This is a sad development, because it means that for most people, those beautiful texts, from Scripture and ancient texts, were replaced by texts written by men and women far removed from the world in which the Liturgy has its source.

Hymns properly belong to the Divine Office, and not to Mass. In the United States, even before Vatican II, many places had English hymns at Mass. Some of these hymns are beautiful texts with beautiful music. They were written with a view to encouraging congregational singing and teaching the truths of the faith. It is also true, however, that some hymns are banal, trite, of questionable musical value and hard to sing. After Vatican II, the solemn sung liturgy was almost universally replaced by a Low Mass recited by a priest in the language of the people over which were imposed hymn texts and tunes, many of which are close to secular 1960s and 1970s pop music and which has been rightly criticized as sacropop.

At Prince of Peace, the Choir sings the Propers at the Extraordinary Form and at Solemn Masses in the Ordinary Form. This is so that the faithful can be exposed to these texts. Even though we privilege the singing of the actual propers, we recognize that many people have become accustomed to hymns at Mass. Our Sung Masses often feature English or Latin hymns, taken from the most beautiful pieces in the repertoire of Catholic and Protestant church hymnody. We do, however, avoid all sacropop. Our music sheets at Sung Masses include everything you need to pray the Propers of the day as well as to sing the Ordinary of the Mass and the hymns appointed for Entrance, Offertory and Post-Communion. We encourage you to sing!

When you come to Mass, pick up the music sheet and use it at the proper times. Even if you don't think you have a strong voice, you have an integral part to play in the Mass by praying aloud in spoken and sung word the prayers of the Mass. Music is not a quaint addition to the Mass that we could have or not have and it wouldn't matter. It is an integral part of the Mass. The very exercise of singing the Mass penetrates the heart with the Word of God and with beautiful texts of our faith.

If you don't use and work out a muscle, it atrophies. The decline of singing in churches and communities all over our country means that Americans are in danger of becoming paralyzed to music, which is fast becoming the sole province of celebrity pop stars. Only a people that has a song in their hearts can thrive and survive. As St Augustine said of the Church, "We are an Easter people, and Alleluia is our song!" So belt it out at Mass!

Fr Smith
