Twenty-one times in the history of the Church all of the Catholic bishops from around the world have gathered in what are called ecumenical councils. These meetings, held under the authority of the Pope, are assisted in a special way by the Holy Spirit. They clarify doctrine, polish policy, and formulate discipline. The last ecumenical council, Vatican II, met from 1962 to 1965. That council has had an incredible effect on our lives as Catholics. Much of how we view the world and the church is related to this incredible gathering of bishops from around the world.

But how many Catholics have actually ever read the documents of Vatican II? How many Catholics have allowed their perceptions of the last council to be colored by the opinions of others, with little or no reference to what actually happened? Why do so many people talk of the "spirit of Vatican II" and what does that even mean? Why are we fifty years away from it, and there is still so much discussion about it?

As a theologian, one of my interests is in the history and reception of ecumenical councils. My doctoral work was inspired by the phenomenon of how arcane theological battles in the academy then burst onto the scene at Vatican II and radically reformulated the way we view nature and grace, and a lot of other things beside.

In October and November, we are going to explore some of these themes more fully. I will be teaching a class called Vatican II: the Challenge and the Promise. In it we will look at what ecumenical councils are and what they mean for the life of the Church, and read and comment in the four major constitutions of the Council. I invite all of you on Thursday nights at 7p to attend this class. There is some required reading, so it will mean some investment of time outside of class. But I hope that it will also be enlightening and challenging to do some serious theology together.

Fr Smith

Learn how Vatican II provides a map to help us enrich our lives through faith and effectively experience the good news of God's divine mercy.

So, we want to partner with Greenville's Foster and Adopt Resource Center to meet a real need for new backpacks. We want to help the center provide backpacks for every child. The backpacks may be used for school, but they may equally be needed to move clothes and the little familiar treasures kids need to feel safer. Prince of Peace would like to deliver 50 backpacks to the organization, and we need your help! You can drop off a backpack in the Church office or the narthex anytime between now and 25 September.
