23 august 2015

twenty-first sunday in ordinary time (OF year B)
thirteenth sunday after pentecost (EF)

Last week, we looked at the conditions under which we should or should not present ourselves for Holy Communion at a Catholic Mass. But are there reasons why someone who presents themselves for Holy Communion should be denied? For some Christians, Communion is a sign of God's unconditional love, and as such, can never be denied. For some of them, only the baptized should receive. For others, not even that matters. For other Christians, you may only receive if the pastor knows you to be an upright Christian practicing the faith. Catholic discipline is somewhere in the middle.

Ordinarily, the person distributing Holy Communion does not even know who is coming for the Sacrament, much less his spiritual state. That is why the Church puts so much emphasis on the duty of the individual to present himself for Communion only if they are properly disposed. Even if there may be reason to suspect that the person is in the state of mortal sin, it is hard to ascertain that reality. How do you know if the person you saw rob a bank yesterday and come to Communion today did not go to Confession in between and wants to receive Jesus before turning himself in?

When sins are not known or public, the person distributing Communion cannot deny Communion. But when the person receiving obviously has absolutely no idea what he is doing in receiving, or shows contempt towards the Blessed Sacrament, that is another matter. Sometimes, people come up to receive who are obviously not Catholic, and just get up because they think that is what you are supposed to do, and they are usually ok if they receive a blessing or a prayer.

Where it becomes more difficult is in the case of a notorious public sinner whose sin has created public scandal and who has refused to repent despite repeated calls from their proper pastor or bishop to do so. Canon 915 of the Code of Canon Law states: Those who have been excommunicated or interdicted after the imposition or declaration of the penalty and others obstinately persevering in manifest grave sin are not to be admitted to holy communion. To give Holy Communion to someone who publicly rejects Christ and His Church gives grave scandal to the faithful, and makes it seem like Holy Communion is unimportant and that the rules for discernment given by Saint Paul as to whom may receive are not valid. This canon is often ignored by pastors and bishops who are afraid of bad press if they observe the canon. Some even object. But wasn't Judas present at the Last Supper? Did Jesus Himself not give him Communion at the first Mass? If Jesus did, then how can we not do the same?

First of all, no one else but Jesus knew that Judas had betrayed Him. So, he was not a public manifest sinner. The Church's discipline follows Jesus in not denying the Eucharist to those whose sin may be hidden. Also, the sequence of events in the Gospel accounts is important to understand what came when. Although St Augustine and St John Chrysostom considered Judas to have been present, a case can be made that Judas was present for the dipping of the bread as part of the Passover Meal, but left immediately after the first part of the meal. The institution of the Eucharist was not until a later part of the meal, after Judas had departed. There is a fascinating discussion of this at <http://www.stgeorgephilly.org/wp-content/uploads/Did-Judas-Take-Communion-Edited.pdf>. If we take the narrative of the Gospels and try to iron out a sequence, there is reason to suspect that Our Lord did not give Judas Communion, who ended up being the first person to leave Mass early!

Fr Smith

On Monday, July 27, the National Executive Board of the Boy Scouts of America (BSA) ratified a resolution stating that no adults can be denied registration as employees or non-serving volunteers of the Boy Scouts of America "on the basis of sexual orientation." The resolution also affirms a chartered organization's right to select its unit leaders based on its religious principles, rejects any interference with that right, and provides that local Scout councils will not interfere with chartered organizations' rights in this regard. As chartering organizations, individual parishes, institutions and Catholic schools have always had this right.

It is not entirely clear how these rights will be squared with previous policy changes the BSA has made, or how they will work in practice, but it appears that the resolution respects the needs of Catholic chartering organizations in the right to choose leaders whose character and conduct are consistent with Catholic teaching. I am facing the change with cautious optimism.

At the same time, the National Catholic Committee on Scouting (NCCS) expresses strong concern about the practical implications of this resolution, especially for our young people in Scouting, and whether the term 'sexual orientation' will be correctly understood and applied only in reference to sexual inclination and not to sexual conduct or behavior. NCCS also expresses concern that the resolution articulates a position on adult sexual conduct that does not make clear that sexual behavior should be reserved to a husband and wife in marriage.

There certainly are differences in religious beliefs among various chartering organizations and society in general, and these differences have played a part in the creation of this resolution. While these fluctuating situations will be increasingly challenging, there is still a strong need to recognize the vital importance of providing a Catholic emphasis to Scouts and Scouters seeking ways to live out their "duty to God." I continue to support Catholic parishes and schools in chartering Boy Scout units and encourage parishes to select leaders who support the teachings of the Catholic Church.

The NCCS and I are willing to see how this policy can work and how we can remain consistent with our Catholic teaching and continue to charter troops with the Boy Scouts of America. We think we can do that.

The mission of Prince of Peace is to share the fullness of the Gospel to all we encounter in our lives by equipping disciples to create and strengthen a personal relationship with Christ. By the grace of God, we are called to strive for personal holiness, participate fully in the vibrant life of the Church's Tradition and transform the world.
